Parents or adult guardians who bring children to the library are responsible for their protection and safety and must never leave children unattended.

When a young child is in the library unattended by a parent or adult guardian, university police will be called to ensure the safety of the child and to assist in locating a parent or guardian.

Parents or adult guardians are responsible for children’s use of the Libraries, including access to the Internet. Children or adolescents, under the age of 18, with no university affiliation, must be accompanied by a parent or guardian when using public workstations.

Library personnel may request identification to verify the age and university affiliation of any unaccompanied young person.

Thank you for your cooperation in this matter.

June 20, 2003