The Company Town at Seabrook Farms
Internment, Migration, and Resettlement in the WWII Era
A Two-Week Institute at Rutgers University–New Brunswick

The Company Town at Seabrook Farms, NJ: Internment, Migration, and Resettlement in the WWII Era is a two-week summer institute for K-12 teachers sponsored by the National Endowment for the Humanities. It will take place at Rutgers University–New Brunswick from July 16 to 27, 2018.

At a moment when the United States’ policies toward immigrants, refugees, and guestworkers have become a matter of national concern and an unavoidable topic of discussion in schools and homes across the country, a goal of this institute is to train teachers to become intermediaries who can direct these conversations to the analysis of historical evidence while also calling attention to the economic, political, and social issues at stake in the present.

For more information please visit our site: nehseabrookfarms.org

INSTITUTE
July 16–27, 2018
Rutgers University–New Brunswick

Application Deadline
March 1, 2018

If you are a K-12 teacher in the United States and interested in applying, please consult: nehseabrookfarms.org